Difficult science trivia questions and answers

Warning: Can only detect less than 5000 charactersAnd finally, acceptance. Your child's questions will probably fall into these phases, and you will ask you to repeat the answers often. The reactions of a child to death are difficult to predict, but there are some typical models. Guilt and Angerto Cuncol Denial, given to your child every time it is necessary that yes, grandfather died, and will not return, but those who always love him remember him. Do not use misleading terms like "sleeping" and "went away"; The first could make your child crazy Go to bed, and the second leads her to expect the return of her grandfather. And do not use confusable euphemisms like "called a house" and "happy in paradise". Your child will find it difficult to understand why people are sad when death seems so good. If your child shows anger by the doctor to not treat her grandfather or God for having let him die, it is probably the best to be empathetic. Even other family members are angry, you can explain, but anger will not change the situation. You can also encourage play therapy if your child is old enough to act out roles with dolls or stuffed animals. It is located in the area of the fault that you can check a vital question but not verbalized: the child will ask if he was responsible for the death of his grandfather. Children often feel responsible for a death because they have inserted badly or told someone to leave. Your reassurance is needed. Keep talking about her grandfather, always emphasizing the fun that the child had with him and how grandfather loved the child. When your child seems to have accepted the reality of death, allowing her to cry with you, to share your sadness, to complete your sadness the mourning process. Keep talking about her grandfather; visit the tomb together, if you wish. Explain and let your child share in any commemorative activity that performs, how to contribute to an organization or planting a tree. A point after death, your child can feel a great fear - fear that you will die, the fear that you will die and leave it alone and indifferent, unnamed that if the grandfather can die, something terrifying and horrible can happen. Despite your constant reassurance, your child can regress in areas where he had taken from recently foundard steps, like the night waking up, the formation of the toilet or eating. Support with her; The stage will pass. Another question that your child will inevitably find, especially if he or she is about to get a little brother - is the children come. In the next section, we will offer some suggestions to answer your child's questions about reproduction and sexuality. This information is exclusively for informational purposes.
