Forty minutes after the researchers treated leather samples with an active ingredient in self-cutting ones, from the DHA, found that over 180% additional free radicals formed during sun exposure with respect to untreated skin. Another ingredient of sÅ ©, erythulose, produced a similar response. The interaction between the chemical bronzing process and UV light overloads the free-radical skin defense system, according to Jung and her colleague Thomas Erarling. For a day after the truck apply, excessive exposure to the sun must be avoided and sunscreen should be worn outdoors, they say; An antioxidant cream could also minimize the production of free radicals.
